It is pleasure working for Eli. He can be a bit bossy, but he knows his business.

This Inn is the nicest I have been employed at. I don't want to speak ill of Ramada, but even with her renovations she cannot hold a candle to what Eli's Inn offers. Soft beds, good food, and even the stables are elegant.

We have been working long days and well into the nights to get ready for this .. um... I think it is called a census. Something about paying taxes and going to your homeland.

Well, this is my homeland. Bethlehem. It has always been a sleepy little town. But with this event the city has come awake. We have quickly filled up the reservation book. I sure hope we will have enough room for all those people. The master says we must put them three to a bed. It will be very crowded but so exciting!
